Memo Stirs Doubts On Bush Statements On Contra Supplies

By David Hoffman and Walter Pincus Washington Post Service

Mr. Bush, the front-runner for the Republican presidential nomi-nation, has said he never talked with the former agent, Felix Rodri-gnez, about the clandestine effort to supply the rebels, or contras. He has said the subject did not come up at their meeting in Mr. Bush's office on May 1, 1986.

On Tuesday, for the first time, documents and sworn depositions made public by the congressional committees investigating the Irancontra affair directly conflicted with the statements by Mr. Bush and his staff that they did not know Mr. Rodrignez's activities.

The Two Kims: Only Name and Goal Are Same

By Clyde Haberman SEOUL - They are nearly always immped together as the two Kims, but they could not be more different.

Kim Dae Jung, the one better known to non-Koreans, is an intense man of humble back-ground, mildly ascetic in manner. Kim Young Sam, by contrast, is an easygoing man born to comfort, anabashed in his enjoyment of a good meal and pleasant surroundings. Kim Dae Jung is a political theorist and stem-winding orator. Kim Young Sam is a political pragmatist and backroom deal-maker. Kim Dae Jung has a penchant for inflammatory remarks that set the country's military-installed govern-ment to fidgeting. Kim Young Sam watches his words carefully and tries to avoid provocation. About all that they share is the same surname — that, and a decades old desire to become president, which has been rekindled once again and threatens to add new divisiveness to South Korea's already unsettled politics.

For opposition forces, a full-scale rivalry that has broken out between the two Kims and their factions is a worrisome development as they look to oust the present government in presidential elections to be held in December. The ruling Democratic Justice Party has settled without debate on its candidate, Roh Tac Woo.

The main opposition group, the Remification Democratic Party, is sure to pick one of the Kims. But which one will be chosen is unclear, and as time passes the competition between them grows more intense and the nastiness between their factions more obvious.

Both men insist —with a trace of weariness as the question arises for the 1,000th time — that despite their ambitions they will unite behind a single candidate, no matter which Kim it turns

The Kims have been the political opposition's minant figures for more than 20 years. Their rivalry is deeply rooted. In 1980, after the assassination of President Park Ching Hee, the fractiousness turned to disaster. Military men led by General Chun Doo Hwan, who is now president, used the squabbling as an excuse to stage a coup, and then to curtail personal liberties and political freedom drastically.

Now, as gemine presidential elections are about to be beld for the first time in 16 years, the Kims insist that they are not about to repeat mistakes of the past.

But old ways die hard. Many Koreans, especially in the opposition, worry that both men may choose in the end to run. That, dissidents fear, would lead to a romons split in the anti-government vote and allow Mr. Roh to sail easily to power, assuming that the military does not tire of it all and step in before an election can even be

Iraq Ends 3-Day Lull In Gulf

Planes Attack 2 Targets Near Kharg Island

BAGHDAD - Iraq broke a three-day lull in attacks on Gulf shipping with an air strike Tuesday night on two "large naval targets," its term for oil tankers or merchant ships, a military spokesman said.

The spokesman said the aircraft had attacked the vessels at the waiting area east of Iran's main oil terminal at Kharg Island and had returned safely to base after scoring an "accurate and effective hit.". Iraq's last reported attacks had been against two vessels on Satur-day. Iran has not hit a shipping target since Friday, according to shipping executive Information Minister Latif Nassif al-Jassem told a news confer-ence that Iraq would hit Iranian oil and economic installations until Tehran accepted a United Nations

Security Council resolution, adopted July 20, calling for a cease-fire in the Gulf war. The Iraqi attack put an end to expectations by diplomats in Bagh-dad that Iraq would hold off its raids on Iranian oil routes and shipping in the Gulf during an upcoming visit by the UN secretary-seek a truce implementing the UN A UN spokesman said Mr. Pérez de Cuéllar had still not set the exact dates for the mission but expected general, Javier Pérez de Cuéllar, to to leave later this week. Earlier, 12 Japanese or Japanese manned ships sailed into the Gulf, ending a five-day suspension of Japanese shipping.

The suspension began after a Japanese tanker was attacked last Wednesday, reportedly by Iran's Revolutionary Guards.

Japanese seamen and shipowners lifted the suspension on Gulf shipping after contacts with Iranian and Iraqi diplomats to try to ensure the safety of their vessels.

In Moscow, the Soviet Union and Iran joined in condemning the "imperialist" U.S. presence in the Gulf and called for the removal of all foreign naval ships.

The statement came during a meeting between the Soviet foreign minister, Eduard A. Shevardnadze, and the Iranian deputy foreign minister, Mohammed Larijani.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman, Gennadi L Gerasimov, said at a news conference that the meeting was of "major importance" to the Kremlin, a point emphasized by the high-level access given the relatively junior Iranian official. Kuwait's foreign minister, Sheikh Sabah al-Ahmad al-Sabah arrived in Moscow on Tuesday leading an Arab League delegation for talks with top Soviet officials, Arab sources said.

The delegation also included the Arab League's secretary-general, Chedli Klibi, and Iraq's foreign minister, Tariq Aziz.

They were to meet Prime Minis ter Nikolai I. Ryzhkov and Mr. Shevardnadze on Wednesday.

In Washington, a senior defense official said that the increased U.S. military presence in the Gulf had cost nearly $70 million this year and that the Pentagon was planning to ask Congress for extra money to maintain the force. Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft 4th said the military presence in the Gulf region, where 28 U.S. Navy ships are now stationed, was costing between $15 million and $20 million a month above the normal operational cost

Honecker and Kohl Disagree On Issues but Pledge Contacts

pledged Tuesday to intensify bilateral contacts in fields ranging from travel to sports, but they achieved little on human rights or disarmament issues at the end of the official portion of Erich Honecker's landmark visit to West Germany.

A joint communique, issued after more than 12 hours of talks between the East German leader and Chancellor Helmut Kohl, made clear that the meeting had lived up to its advance billing of being important primarily as a gesture of good will between the two

Mr. Honecker agreed to try to do more to make it easier for East Germans to travel to the West. The Communist government also eased restrictions slightly on imports of published materials, recording tapes and videocassettes.

The two sides agreed to disagree about the Berlin Wall, the shooting of people trying to leave East Ger-many, the possibility for reunification and how to reduce arsenals of short-range nuclear missiles.

a speech prepared for delivery at a dinner Tuesday night given by Mr. Honecker. "No one could have expected anything else."
Mr. Honecker, in his speech, said his visit had been "fruitful" so far. Both leaders, who maintained a wary reserve toward one another in their joint appearances, stuck closely to plans for the first two days of the five-day visit.

Agreement was reached before the trip on most of the language in the communiqué, Mr. Kohl, as expected, accepted an invitation from Mr. Honecker to visit East Germany at a date to be specified later.

The smoothness of the first part of the visit resulted largely from compromise on the terms of the trip, political observers said.

Bonn granted a major concession by receiving Mr. Honecker on Monday with nearly all the honors normally given to a foreign leader, even though West Germany offi-cially does not view East Germany as a foreign country.

Mr. Honecker agreed to the visit even though Bonn rebuffed East nort-range nuclear missiles.

Israeli Says Arafat Gave Him Message

JERUSALEM (AP) — An Israeli Communist legislator said Tuesday that Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization. had given him a "historical and unprecedented" personal message for An Israeli Foreign Ministry official said that he had no confirmation of the message, but noted that it would be the first such message from Mr. Arafat.

The Communist legislator, Charlie Biton, said the message was given to him and three other Israeli lawmakers whom Mr. Arafat greeted at a reception in Geneva on Monday. Mr. Biton said the message was for Prime Minister Yirzhak Shamir and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres. The legislators were part of a 35-member Israeli delegation attending a United Nations conference to discuss Palestinian demands for an independent

Executive Held in Yugoslav Scandal

BELGRADE (Reuters) — The former head of a major Yugoslan company was arrested Tuesday, the latest development in a multi-dollar financial scandal, official sources said. State prosecutors ordered the arrest of Fikret Abdic, who was dismissed over the weekend as chief executive of Agrokomerc, for crimes that posed a "counter-revolutionary threat" to Yugoslavia's Socialist seifmanagement system, they said. The state-owned company issued up to $500 million worth of false promissory notes.

The arrest came after Mr. Abdie's immunity to prosecution as a : member of parliament was waived by the Federal Assembly. Meanwhile the official Tanjug news agency said banks affected by the scandal agree to sue Agrokomerc to recover losses. Further charges also were brought Tuesday against the director of the company's internal bank, who is one of six officials already arrested in connection with the affair.

Spain, U.K. Fail to Agree on Air Fares

LONDON (Reuters) — A deal to make air travel cheaper in Western Europe remained grounded on Tuesday after Spain and Britain failed to reach agreement over how the deal should apply to Gibraltan, British A Foreign Office spokesman said there was no breakthrough in daylong talks between senior officials of the two countries that focused on the status of the British colony's airport.

Spain vetoed a package in June aimed at reducing air fares throughout the European Community because the deal treated the Gibraltar suport as British. The Spanish are seeking to share the airport as a step toward recovering sovereignty of Gibraltar, a rock fortress on the southern tip of the Iberian peninsula that has been in British hands since 1704.

Paralysis in Washington

against divided government is reassem-bling: The president returned on Sunday, and Congress reconvenes on Wednesday. There will be three weeks left until next fiscal year, for which none of the 13 regular appropriations bills has been passed; nor is any likely to be by the time the year begins. Government will once again have to be put on hold, in the form of a continuing resolution. But that is the least of it.

Next year's hudget resolution was adopted in June. The appropriations hills are one of the avenues for carrying such resolutions nut. Reconciliation bills, adjusting the programs ont subject to the appropriations process, are the other. No reconciliation hill is in sight. The bill this year was supposed to contain the tax increase around which the hudget resolution revolves. But the president bas said he would veto a tax increase, so work on one has not begun; nor is it clear that it will.

Instead, in the guise of restoring and strengthening the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction process, the two bouses are busily refighting and weakening the hudget resolution, so that less deficit reducion will be required. The leader in this delicate maneuver is the same Senator Phil Gramm after whom the original process is named. The idea seems to be that if deficit reduction requires a tax increase, as surely it does, let the next president do it.

The problem is political. The Democrats have majorities, but the Republicans have the veto and the filibuster; particularly in the Senate, neither side seems to have the

The world's greatest living argument votes to win. The defense authorization hill has been bung up in an arms control filibuster since May; a campaign finance reform bill has been similarly blocked since June. The Senate will shortly have to deal as well with the nomination of Judge Robert Bork to the Supreme Court; on this, the opposing Democrats have threatened to filibuster. Behind these major tie-ups, other legislation languishes. A clean air deadline looms on Dec. 31; nn action has been taken. The Farm Credit System is nearly bankrupt; so also is the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corpo-ration, but for neither is there yet a bill. Fair housing legislation has yet to emerge from the judiciary committees; a bill to reverse the Supreme Court's 1984 Grove City decision restricting the reach of the anti-discrimination laws has been reported by committee in the Senate but awaits time on the floor. Welfare reform is snarled by disputes over cost and philosophy in both houses; health insurance for catastrophic illnesses has sed the House, but in a form that has the Senate uncertain and the president threatening veto. The trade bills are so cumbersome that the House may appoint 140 conferees. In foreign affairs, there are possible fights ahead on both Central America (further aid to the contras) and the Middle East (arms for the Sandis, ships in the Gulf), as well as the continuing struggle over arms control.

But the budget remains at the heart of this. The president will not bend, and neither party in Congress seems quite to know what to do about it. The government is

Backward in Argentina

Argentine politics throughout this century has repeatedly been seized by a perverse and self-destructive impulse that has done the country immense harm. One of the bearers of that tradition is the Peronist movement -- and unfartunately the Peronists are the chief winners in Sunday's election. They have taken most of the provincial governorships. And although President Raul Alfonsin's party continues to have more seats than any other in the national Chamber of Depudes, it no longer has the two-seat absolute majority that it commanded for the past two years.

It is not the pure arithmetic of seats lost that will undercut Mr. Alfonsin so much as the sense that his country is swinging away from rational and skillful leadership toward the darker and more adventurous alternaoves that have always meant trouble.

Argentina's huge debts to fareign banks were generated largely by capital flight. The government borrowed desperately tn keep its currency from collapsing in the years under the military juntas when wealthy Argentines were sending their money by the tens of billions of dollars to New York and gentina to repay its debts and stabilize its economy is to attract that money back home. The chances of that are going to fall at the same rate at which the Peronists' fortunes rise. In Brazil, a weak government, trying to avoid the necessity for extensive economic reform, is now hunting for allies to join its moratorium nn repaying foreign dehts. If the Argentine government is immobilized and prevented from carrying out its own program of reforms now getting under way, the pressure on it to join a moratorium will rise. That is a shortcut to economic isolation and stagnation.

At the turn of the century, Argentina was one of the world's richest countries. Its GNP per capita was equal to that of the United States. The figure is now about onesixth the U.S. figure - a rare case of a country sliding rapidly backward down the scale of economic development. What happened? It was the result of misguided politics: the familiar mixture of fervid populism and nadonalism represented in that big Peronist vote last weekend.

Nunn Makes His Point

The Reagan administration asked for from being confused, the Georgia Democrat trouble by reinterpreting the Antiballistic found that the secret record corresponded Missile Treaty to allow for "star wars" testing. Now Senator Sam Nunn threatens to ohlige when the Senate considers an expected new treaty on medium-range missiles. The White House deserves the threatened kick, but it would be unfortunate for all concerned if matters came to that.

The trouble started when the administration realized to its horror that the generally accepted interpretation of the ABM treaty would preclude most tests for President Reagan's space-based defense system. Indeed, it is extremely hard to read the treaty any other way, given the testimony of Nixon administration officials to the Senate in 1972. The Reagan administration turned to its lawyers and, mirabile dictu, they discovered that the Senate had been misled! In fact, their Nixon administration predecessors had misled themselves! If the details of the negotiating record were read right, the lawyers explained, virtually any kind of testing would be permissible short of actual deployment of a space-based system.

Congress was in no position to challenge this new interpretation because it had never been given the actual negotiating record. Nor would the administration now share that record with the Senate. Why, that would be too cumbersome and confusing, the Reagan administration insisted.

Mr. Nunn said he was willing to subject himself to such confusion. In fact, he insisted on it, and the White House relented. Far with the public testimony. Both prohibit the testing of space-based systems. He provided a detailed public refutation of the administration's new interpretation. The administration countered with unconvincing legalisms.

It seemed a typical Washington standoff

- until Mr. Nunn carried the logic of the administration's position to its absurd end. All right, he said in a letter to the president, you say the Senate "cannot rely on the testimony of executive branch officials" in presenting a treaty. You say the Senate cannot understand a treaty properly without the tens of thousands of transcript pages, telegrams and memos involved in the enterprise. Well, if so, and if you want the Senate to approve a new missile treaty, you must provide the full record of talks with the Soviet Union on banning medium- and shorterrange missiles from Europe and Asia.

It is a threat with real dangers, and not just of embarrassment for the White House. It was one thing for Mr. Nunn and his staff to study the ABM treaty record. To open any complicated legal document to the scrutiny of all 100 senators, with their conflicting ideological positions, would invite endless delays and hair-raising disputes.

It is up to the White House to avoid this nightmare. The best way for administration officials to protect the hoped for treaty on missiles is to abandon their legally sinful and dangerous new reading of the ABM treaty. - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Reconciliation with East Germany is frangh1 with great danger. All favors depend on the good will of the East German government, which in turn depends on the Soviet Union. It has therefore become very important to the West Germans not to upset the Russians. This affects Bonn's attitude to questions as disparate as the imposition of martial law in Poland, the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the American bombing of Libya and joint Western action against terrorism. This year 6,716 Germans have been allowed to come from the Soviet Union to West Germany, compared with only 753 in the whole of last year, but 1.8 million still live there. The hostage problem in Eastern Eu-rope dwarfs the hostage problem in Beirut. It is essential that the West German government is not persuaded to pay political ransoms which undermine the unity of the West.

Nouvelle Droite, Nazi-Maoists, Mullahs and a Lesson

By William Pfaff

P ARIS — An unexpected but not illogical connection between European rightist extremism and the Ira-nian revolution has been revealed in the disclosure that the Iranian Embassy here has contributed funds to a rightist Paris bookstore and publisher.

The man at the center of the current diplomatic crisis between France and Iran is Wahid Gordji, officially the embassy's translator but a man French authorities consider a key to Iran's political-military operations in Europe. It was Mr. Gordji who subsidized publication and distribution of 100,000 copies of the shop's catalog. The works the bookshop offers include "The Jewish Myth of the Halocaust" and facsimiles of anti-Semitic works published in France during the Nazi occupation. But this is not a mere case of opportunistic collabora-don in the slander of Israel and the Jews. Edwy Plenel of the newspaper Le Monde argues that there is a real part of the far right in Europe and the tenets of the Islamie revolution.

But based nn Mr. Plenel's own evidence, it seems less convergence than a conversion of these Europeans to a conception of the Islamie revolution that has more to do with the European rightists' views on race and naconal destiny than reality in Iran.

What Mr. Plenel tells us diverges strikingly from the usual notion of the extreme right as racist, authoritarian and militaristic. That fits a part of the far right — the populist, chauvinist right. But there is also in Europe a more intellectual and revolutionary

Democracy Spreads, Consensus Arrives

IN the eyes of many, democracy seemed, 50 years ago, to be a symbol of impotence, a formula in danger of extinction. Today, thanks notably to a rise in living standards and to the development of education, it has never been more widespread. No longer is there fear that Germany, Italy, Spain, Greece or Portugal might return to dictatorship; it has been rolled back in Latin America, and now in Southeast Asia. And no one can deny that the Soviet Union is following China on the road to change.

France is no exception to the rule. Communism has become more bourgeois while at the same time moving nearer the fringe. On the other side, the National Front, to consolidate and amplify its electoral breakthrough, is speaking in terms more reminiscent of American populism than of the good old-fashioned extreme right. The truth is that the consensus among the French on their government and society has never been so great. — André Fontaine in Le Monde (Paris).

right, whose members are drawn not only to Iran's revolution but to the terrorism of the Red Brigades.

These people have enemies in com-mon with Iran and with the terrorist left: Israel certainly, and the United States, with the materialist, "mongrel" civilization it represents, but also the "courgeois society" of Western Eu-rope. This amalgam (called "Nazi-Maoist" in Italy) brings neo-fascists together with elements from the "New Right" in France and Belgium.

These people hold that European civilization is weak because it has been false to itself. It is corrupted by decadent American values, by Marxism and socialism. They want to see a new imperial Europe created to oppose both America and the Soviet Union.

They see men engaged in a biologi-cal competition for domination. They look on conflict as essential to human progress. The so-called Nouvelle Droite in France is particularly enamored of the idea of Europe as a warrior society descended from Aryan conquerors in antiquity, later corrupted by Christiani ty and infiltrated by lesser races. Does this sound familiar?

In other ways, the program of this extreme right is internationalist (it wants Enrope united), revolutionary and elitist, Terrorists of the Red Brigades' ilk are looked on as allies; they attack the common enemies and express the same loathing for Europe's moderate democracies, the same longing for "hard," militant leaders. As these people are committed to the idea that Europeans constitute a mique and superior race and civiliza-tion, it is logical to believe in the rightness of other "races" purifying themselves by going back to the sources of their own civilizations. Iran is an example of this being done, to warld-shaking effect. Some European rightists even argue that Islam is a religion superior to Christianity because it is a warrior belief - "absolute monotheism, exempt from any taint of anthropomorphism or polytheism, integrating every part of existence into a ritual order," as an Italian writer describes it. A theorist of the Nouvelle Droite says, "There is not the slightest contradiction between nur opposition to immigration and our desire for a closer collaboration between Europeans and Arabs." The Arabs have their destiny; Europe has its own.

The groups with the ideas Mr. Plenel describes are small. Some, though, have been mixed up in terrorism, or recommend it, and no one can deny that ideas like these could once again inspire a popular movement. Modern liberal democratic political society is the possession of a very small minority of fortunate people on this globe; we have every reason to continpe to consider it a fragile possession. Of Honor Wilt Can Sure And Resolve

By Flora Lewis

PARIS — The point where laws and a sense of higher moral obji. gation conflict is an ancient human dilemma, regularly renewed. Recent examples highlight some of the differences between honorable responses and smug, self-righteons ones.

es and sming, self-nighteons ones.

There is the case of Mathias Rusi, the 19-year-old West German who flew into Moscow's Red Square. He apologized at his trial for the danger and insult he caused, explaining that he wanted to dramatize the cause of peace in what he thought would be an experience. The Soviet court sentenced him to four years in prison.

The requirements of judicial procedure have been met, and it is to be hoped that mercy will now be shown by sending him home. He risked his will life, actually harming a life of the sound of the s to call attention to his hopes.

There is the case of Mordechai Vanunu, the Israeli who told a British pected about his country's under preparations. He is now standing. preparations. He is now standing tri-al in total secrecy in Jerusalem, Inge-nicusly, by writing on his hand and holding it to the window of a police van, he got nut the message that he had been forcibly abducted. So now the windows are blacked out when he is transported through the street and he is abliged to wear a helmet to keep him completely incommunicado. He too violated laws to call attention to his fears, but not by espionage, stealth or betrayal. Like Mr. Rust, he sought to appeal to public opinion, trusting in people's intelligence. Israel's security interest would have been better served if its govern-ment had ignored him. He did not give away the kinds of technical secrets that could do real damage, as some American spies have done in recent years. His revelations would have been put down as another not quite confirmed report if they had not been corroborated by his kidnapping and star-chamber trial.

By wit and personal risk, not by violence or deception, both men tried to send messages to the world against war and the hatreds that others work so hard to inflame. The law is sten and they are obliged to submit, but they were not dishonorable. .

There is a distinction here put with great poignancy by James Bond Stockdale in a speech he made in April. Mr. Stockdale was a vice admiral in the U.S. Naval Air Force who was shot down over North Vietnam and kept eight years in a Hanoi prison where he was tortured repeatedly. He survived and never gave in to his captors' demands, by maintaining what he calls "resolve,"

"Resolve," he said, "is too expensive to waste on trivial things and too precious to throw away on anyth you don't believe to your bones to be worthy of you. On the other hand, the things we do consider worthy of ourselves demand it." Mr. Stockdale is convinced that such an individual standard must also be observed as a national standard if the country is to meet the trials of the world effectively. "National resolve," he said, "is too valuable, it's too hard to come by, it takes too much out of us, to commit it to any cause that is not worthy of our nation." That is the answer to the lying selfrighteous, self-serving hrand of patrio-tism that Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North offered the public. It is an answer to the argument that deception, cheating, dirty tricks and double-deal-ing are justified when practiced secretly and illegally in the name of the nation. Mr. Stockdale was addressing himself to the lie behind the Gulf of Toukin resolution, which launche America into the Vietnam War. "It gave us faise confidence in escalation theory and a guilty con-science," he said. "I say let us be aware that resolve and commitment and moral leverage, the only give that ties America's sons to their leaders, cannot be displaced by throw-sway concepts of finesse and trickery. These are not worthy of us, and because they are not worthy of us we cannot rely on them. The deepest human resolve is not huilt on self-deception, rationalization or cuteness. It has its roots in the finer elements of human beings and of their countries. Thus, resolve to stand for what is worthy of us, to live so that our own best cons not offended. Only this will perpetuate the best of us and our institutions for generations to come."

The words were spoken well before the Iran-contra hearings but might have been their peroration. It is bad to break laws. It is worse to be without conscience, for a person or a nation. The New York Times.

That Berlin-Cuba Crisis Had a Mongoose Angle

OSLO - Dean Rusk's evidence that John Kennedy was prepared to go further than he did go to avoid a conflict with the Soviet Union should come as no surprise. (See "Rusk Reveals Ploy Prepared by Kennedy Over Cuba," Aug. 29.) President Kennedy had made no secret of his anger with the Pentagon when he learned that it had not already carried out his orders to remove Jupiter missiles from Turkey and Italy. Since he intended to get rid of the missiles anyway, it was only a matter of finding the formula that was least embarrassing politically. As it was, Nikita Khrushchev was even more frightened than Mr. Kennedy, and let him off the hook.

Other important aspects of the events of October 1962 have received insufficient attention. It is misleading to refer to the episode as the Cuban missile crisis. Mr. Khrushchev's gamble with the missiles was part of his effort to extricate himself from the Berlin crisis, so it would be more accurate to speak of the Berlin-Cuba crisis. And when people refer to the crisis they never link it to Project Mongoose. That was the Kennedy program to get rid of Fidel Castro.

The evidence is circumstantial, but I find it hard to believe that Project Mongoose did not influence the Cuban leader's decision to go along with Mr. Khrushchev on deploying missiles to Cuba. In 1962, Mr. Khrushchev found himself in an awkward position. His earlier bombast had produced a flood of refugees to West Berlin, and he was obliged in 1961 to accede to Walter Ulbricht's desire to build the wall. Having created an artifiBy John Ausland Communist Cuba, and toppling Cast something of an obsession with him."

cial crisis, he could not be satisfied with such an ignominious outcome. He wanted the Western countries to recognize the Ulbricht government.

He was, however, unprepared to run the risks involved in challenging allied access to the city. With 20 divisions in East Germany, he did not lack for military power, but the ouclear missiles and bombers that President Kennedy had targeted nn the Soviet Union gave him pause.

If, the Soviet leader reasoned, he could slip some missiles into Cuba, he would be able to confront Mr. Kennedy nn a more equal basis. His plan was to deploy the missiles in Cuba and then travel to the United Nations in New York. There he would suggest that he and the American president settle this troublesome Berlin problem.

This does not explain why Mr. Castro went along with what he must have known was a risky scheme. After the Bay of Pigs disaster in early 1961, President Kennedy told the American public that he took full responsibility. He then went into the next room and told the CIA and the Pentagon that he wanted to be rid of Mr. Castro. Thus was Project Mongoose born. The most authoritative account of that project is by U. Alexis Johnson, who represented the State Department on the committee that supervised Mangoose. In his memoir "The Right Hand of Power," Mr. Johnson says that President Kennedy "felt personally humiliated by a The Clauch committee, which investigated covert activities of the CIA and the Pentagon, maintained that Mongoose included plans to kill Mr. Castro. Mr. Johnson says that the committee on which he sat never discussed assassination, but he adds that had the program succeeded it "would have probably resulted in Castro's death." Project Mongoose employed thousands of Cuban refugees for covert propaganda and sabotage. Mr. Castro was bound to know a lot about it. Is it unreasonable to think this knowledge increased his fears of an invasion and his willingness to cooperate with Mr. Khrushchev on the missiles? After the confrontation over the missiles, the Kennedy administration closed down Project

Mongoose. Instead it concentrated on economic measures designed to destroy the Cuban economy. While these continue even today, they have neither brought down Mr. Castro nor prevented his and-U.S. activities in Africa and Central America. Mr. Khrushchev relaxed his pressure on Berlin. A decade later, with Willy Brandt in the lead, the Western powers recognized East Germany.

The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the Reagan administration's recent adventures in Iran demonstrate that Mr. Khrushchev and Mr. Kennedy had no monopoly on foolish decisions.

What we must hope is that the countries they headed will never again bring us as close to the precipice as those two men did in October 1962.

The Buying-Up of America: No Grounds for Panic

WASHINGTON—The business pages have been replete with stories of foreign takeovers of American firms and of the growing share of fareign ownership in U.S. real estate, most notably the rapid growth of Japanese investment in the United States. While this growth is not trivial, there is no reason to fear that the Japanese are gaining control of U.S. industry and real estate.

Not so long ago it was U.S. invest-ment abroad that created unfounded concerns in Europe that the United economies. And within the last decade there was near panic that the OPEC countries were buying up everything in sight. In fact, U.S. investments abroad have been of great benefit to host countries. The U.S. economy can also benefit from foreign investment.

The enormous Japanese trade sur-plus has been the driving force for the growth of that country's foreign investment. Last year the Japanese invested $100 billion abroad, and about two-thirds of that came to the United States. But the overwhelming bulk of Japanese investment has been passive investment in the form of stocks and bonds. There is no danger that Japa-nese investment is enabling the Japanese to control U.S. business.

Most foreign capital arrives in the form of fixed-income investments such as bonds and bank deposits.

These amount to about three-fourths ments in corporate stocks amount to about one-sixth of foreign investment in the United States. (Investment is considered direct if it amounts to more than 10 percent of the ownership of a business or property; otherwise it is considered portfolin investment.) Japanese direct investment in real estate has been growing rapidly as Japan's trade surplus has soared and as the yen has strengthened relative to the dollar. A Salomon Brothers report estimates that the Japanese invested $4 billion in U.S. real estate last year, nearly three times the total of all past Japanese real estate investments in the country. Yet the $4 bil-lion is minor compared with the total spending on new construction in America of more than $300 billion.

Most Japanese real estate investment is concentrated on office buildings and hotels. Again, the $4 billion of Japanese investment is a small proportion of the tatal commercial construction of $140 hillion. The figures on Japanese direct ownship of American businesses are similarly reassuring. The total value of all direct investment by Japanese busi-nesses in the United States is extremely small —about $23 billion at the end of 1986. Most of that does not involve manufacturing, but refers to wholesale trading companies that operate in the United States as an arm of the Japanese export sector. The accumulated stock of Japanese manufacturing investments in America totaled only $3 visible than the portfolio investments billion at the end of 1986.

By Martin and Kathleen Feldstein are direct investments in businesses

Although foreign direct investment in America is growing rapidly, the United States still has a far larger and in real estate. Yet these total only stock of direct investments abroad than foreigners have in America. Last year, U.S. earnings on direct investments in the rest of the world were four times as great as foreign countries' earnings on their direct investments in the United States. Far from representing an intro ate danger of foreign control of the American economy, the capital in-flow from abroad has helped to keep U.S. interest rates down and has thus permitted a higher overall level of investment in America. Along with the benefits of imported technology and, particularly in the case of Japanese investment, of new manager techniques, there have been improvements in employment as a result.

The recent growth of Japanese equity investments may even have bad something to do with the extraordinary bull market of 1987. Despite record highs, U.S. price earnings rados remain in the 15-to-20 range. while in Japan the ratios have been in the 40-to-60 range. As long as American stocks look cheap to Japanese

The Camera May Not Blink But It Can Sure Be Blind

By A.M. Rosenthal

N EW YORK — For decades to come, American scholars will be dissecting the Iran-contra hearings that seemed so important back in the late 1980s, to find out for themselves what they told about the Reagan era.

There is a chance now for scholars, historians and journalists to examine a new kind of historical document that will have an impact on what tomorrow thinks about today. It is like being in one of those time-warp movies.

The document is the videocassette of a contemporary event of historical significance, packaged for the consumer market. These video documents will be as easily available as books; libraries will stock them and good video stores of the future certainly will have a histoly section, just as bookstores do now.

The historian or student or journalist of the near future will use them as source material, popping them into a videocassette recorder to get an on-the-spot look at yesterday. The advantage, of course, will be that the material will be firsthand, not strained through the mind of another historian or journalist. Pick any emotional controversy of the past — imagine being able to see the faces of Captain Dreyfus and his accusers - and the importance of this kind of research document becomes vivid.

There is just one problem, and there are two video-documents of the Irancontra hearings oow on sale that illusfrate it: A visual record of an event can turn out to be just as spotty, biased and misleading as any print version. The historian will have to keep his gnard as high as ever.

The cassettes now being sold deal almost entirely with Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North. One is the 90-minute "Oliver North: Memo to History," produced by MPI Home Video. Its first section whipe back and forth in short "bites" of Colonel North at his most pithy, confronting his enemies. It is chopped up and does neither historical nor journalistic justice to the colonel or his congressional interrogators. This section gives oo idea of where a parsection gives to have a where a par-icularly feisty passage came during the hearings, what led up to it and what was said in response. ... It makes the whole document questionable as a piece of history or jour-nalism. Its value is only as an early example of something oew and important, like the scratchy recordings of ing, how they are doing it, and why. old radio news broadcasts.

The other cassette is the two-hour "Lientenant Colonel Oliver North: His Story." This tape, produced by Turner Home Entertainment and Forum Home Video, uses film and commentary by Cable News Network, which is owned by the Turner company. For journalists it is a humbling demonstration of how an important news organization, in haste to get something out, can go wrong; well, almost humbling. CNN generally gives complete, iast, straight news, and since it does that 24 hours a day, it is almost always being watched in newsrooms around the country. It can influence journalists' responses and decisions. That in itself gives the octwork importance.

On the cassette, the student of the future will first see a CNN anchorman, Bernard Shaw, standing in front of the Capitol, and hear this message:
This man from upstate New York, this man from the sweaty boxing ring at the Annapolis academy, this decorated blood-and-guts man from Vietnam where bullets tore flesh and men died, this family man of love and care, this man whose mortal enemy is com nism and aggression . . . [became] the switching point for President Reagan's determined effort to help the Nicaraguan contras, the freedom fighters, 'the resistance' — as North called them."

Then follows two hours of selected testimony by Colonel North that is vir-tually devoid of context, questioning or contradiction. In a sense, the hearings were a trial before the public and the Congress. The CNN version is not an accounting of the trial but a statement for the defense. From a defense attorney, fine; from a news network, a distortion of the historic reality.

It is an advocacy piece of work, just as some of the newspaper and maga-zine stories that showed Colonel North as nothing but a hypocritical trickster were advocacy pieces. On the cassette, the colonel shows intelligence, a quick mind and a lust for intellectual combat. The problem is that since the CNN videocassette is a job of advocacy history, the viewer can never be certain just where reality lies. The videocassette of today will be a historian's tool tomorrow. These two versions show that the videotape can be as untrustworthy as the ballpoint pen as a recorder of history. The videocassettes are reminders to journalists and historians from way back in 1987: What counts is who is doing the record-The New York Times,

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Great Leap Backward?

Regarding "Sichuan's Fertile Farms Hold a Lesson for America" (Aug. 20): Neal R. Peirce sees today's American farmer as a peasant who has been un-done financially by his specialization. He depicts the smaller, self-contained farm of 50 years ago as a happy, pastoral version of what in reality was a dawn-to-dusk labor camp not only for the farmer, but for his wife and children as well. It still is, for that matter, but its productivity has risen to allow most farmers a decent standard of living.

Today's American farmers do not want to try to raise families on what they can earn carrying "chickens, ducks and vegetables" to market on their backs or their bicycles. Specialization has allowed farmers to enter the 20th century. The answer to the crisis in American farming is not to share living space with farm animals or to shovel waste into biogas pits - the answer is a fair price for the world's best agricultural products.

Yes, there is a lesson in the Chinese model; but it shows how far we have come, not where we should go. A Cessna, Not a Jet Fighter Regarding the report "On Trial, Rust Says He Erred" (Sept. 3): The Russians have convicted Mathias Rust of "violation of flight regulations" and "malicious hooliganism." Ironically, such words more aptly describe their conduct toward Korean Airlines Flight 007. The Russians simply lack the moral authority for anyone to take the Rust trial seriously. Given what they are capable of doing to civilian airliners, their show of self-righteous indignation and legalism seems most misplaced. After all, Mr. Rust did not use his Cessna to shoot down a Soviet airliner; all he did was play a spectacular aerial prank. And before anyone gets carried away by the "openness" of the Rust trial, recal how Soviet warships kept other vessels (even those carrying mourners) far from the place where the KAL flight plunged into the sea. Yet Moscow welcomed Westerners to Mr. Rust's trial, hoping their presence would lend credibility to the proceedings, and to the accusers.

The American Club of Lisbon recently celebrated its 40th year of existence. The club organizes hunches, an annual dinner-dance (this year with President Mário Soares as our gnest) and many other events. There is also an active American women's club - the American Women of Lisbon, or AWOL.

As in your headline, our approach best described as "No Frills, Friendly." EDWARD R.M. KANE.

Something Precise

T HE ancient languages and their poems and plays have the singular ability to help us free ourselves from yulgarity. I do not mean "vulgar" in the Roman sense of "common." The Greeks had a more insightful word, apeirokalia, mean-ing the lack of experience with things that are beautiful. The Parthenon, Euripides, the perfection of each Platonic dialogue, e sound of Greek sentences - all these have the power to raise us up. It is hardly the most practical argument for studying the classics. But they can give us a sense of something precise, something noble

U.S. Aides Worry That Reagan Is Losing Control on Contras

By John M. Goshko
Washington Past Service

WASHINGTON - One month after President Ronald Reagan and the Speaker of the House, Jim Wright, announced their Central America peace initiative, many administration officials say they believe events are moving so far be-yond U.S. control that Mr. Reagan soon may find both Congress and U.S. allies in Central America no longer willing to support the Nicaraguan rebels.

These officials - many of them supporters of the rebels, known as contras - say developments in the last month threaten to undermine the contra cause despite repeated White House assurances that Mr. Reagan will fight for renewed congressional financing for the rebels unless the Sandinist government in Nicaragua cuts its ties to Cuba and the Soviet Union and permits pluralistic democracy.

In several interviews, political appointees and career officials in the State Department and other agencies said the administration had been losing the initiative to forces whose idea of a regional peace agreement differs considerably from what Mr. Reagan had in mind when he joined Mr. Wright in Their original goal was to maneuver Nicaragua into a position in which it had to agree to the terms of the Reagan-Wright plan or face the tras. possibility of renewed contra funding after Sept. 30. Unexpectedly, however, the U.S. move prodded Nicaragua, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala to propose their own, and somewhat different, peace plan.

U.S. Congress Returns To a Mountain of Work On Contentious Issues | January | January

By Linda Greenhouse New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - With nearly all of the year's most difficult legislative problems unresolved, Congress returns from its monthlong summer recess Wednesday to what is shaping up as a long and chaotic fall or even winter session.

Deep differences over taxes, trade policy, arms control and Central America must be addressed, some urgently, in an atmosphere already highly charged by the ap-proach of the 1988 elections. Even these contentious issues could be overshadowed by the battle in the Senate, which may evolve into a filibuster, over the confirmation of Judge Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court.

Congressional leaders who once planned to conclude this year's session by mid-October now say that even Thanksgiving may be an optimistic target.

"If it were up to the House alone, we could conclude by mid-October," said Representative Jim Wright of Texas, the House speak-But there is no realistic hope that we will do that, given the deliberate efforts by some in the Senate to keep the trains from moving on

The speaker's reference was to the Senate's Republicans, who have been able to turn the body's intricate rules to their advantage in preventing action on such matters as a Defense Department hill containing arms control provisions; a maor campaign financing bill; and

• The most urgent business before Congress is adopting a federal budget for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. The House has passed 9 of the 13 appropriations bills that make up the $1 trillion budget; the Senate has passed none. President Ronald Reagan has threatened to veto several of the bills. Many difficult budgetary decisions must be made in the next few weeks. The new budget, essentially a Democratic product, calls for $19.3 billion in tax increases, which have yet to be specified and which the president has said he will not accept. A compromise on the pace and means of reducing the deficit over the next few years eluded conessional negotiators on the eve of the recess.

• The conference committee to resolve the differences between the versions of the trade bill passed by the House and the Senate began meeting just before the recess. The differences are substantial, with the president threatening to veto both versions.

• The sudden start of Central American peace talks early last month took both the administration and its congressional critics by surprise. The situation is fluid and confusing.

The peace plan calls for a cease-fire by Nov. 7, but with the current congressional authority for military aid to the Nicaraguan rebels expiring in three weeks, and a president who has vowed not to abandon the contras, the late-comme truce on Capitol Hill may be short-At stake in the increasingly bitter The administration may ask

The pro-military National As-sembly has accused "groups of the traditional oligarchy" of leading the protests with the aim "to establish a political regime in Panama that would allow the United States to remain after the year 2000."

Ricardo Arias Calderón, leader of the Christian Democratic Party and one of those denounced as "traitors" by the assembly, said all opposition groups support the "full irreversible fact." 'Noriega's argument is typical of dictators who feel rejected by their own people," he said.

But Dennis P. McAuliffe, the canal's U.S. administrator, admitted that the Panamanian government's fective in shifting the focus of debate in the country by casting doubt on U.S. intentions

The treames were signed by President Jimmy Carter and General Omar Torrijos, a populist officer who brought the military to power in 1968 and dominated Panama until his death in an airplane crash

Under the treaties, Panama was given a bigger share of shipping toll revenues, and they now account for 8 percent of the national income. But the canal's operating budget remains under U.S. congressional control until 1999, when full operational control passes to Panama. At that time, U.S. military personnel based in Panama for canal defense, now numbering 10,000. must withdraw from the country.

AMSTERDAM — Klass de, Jonge, the Dutch anthropologist, who was released from South Africa in a complex prisoner swap Monday, admitted Tuesday that he, had smuggled arms for South African guerrillas.

At an impromptu news conference at Schiphol Airport, Mr. de. Jonge said, "Yes, I have sinegled weapons and explosives, but how, and what is a story I will tell later." He looked happy and relaxed as he entered the airport terminal which was crowded with reporters: and anti-apartheid supporters Mr., de Jonge said his sympathies for the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla group grew dur-

Hans van den Broek, the Dutch minister of foreign affairs, and nounced earlier Tuesday that the Netherlands would order such an investigation.

Mr. de Jonge was released in Mozambique with Pierre-Andre Albertini of France and 133 Augo, lan soldiers in exchange for Major Wynand du Toit of the South African Army. Mr. Albertini arrived a France on Tuesday.

The Dutch government denied Tuesday that it had made any concessions to South Africa in the ne gotiations that led to Mr. de Jonge's release.

Explaining his decision to investigate Mr. de Jonge's South African activities, Mr. van den Broek said: "The diplomatic asylum granted to de Jonge was in no way designed to subtract him from the normal course of justice."

In Cape Town, President Pieter W. Botha waited up until the early hours of Toesday morning to welcome home Major do Toit.

The major, only recently pro-moted from captain, was treated as a hero two years after he was captured deep in northern Angola and embarrassed the South African government by saying he had been sent to sabotage a U.S.-Angolan oil installation. Pretoria denied the allegation, implying that he had been forced to make the statement.

On Tuesday, Major du Toit told Mr. Botha he had never doubted that the government would secure

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam —"In the information world, there can be no sacred cows." The editor of a Vietnamese Communist Party newspaper was speaking. The edi-tor, Tuat Viet of Saigon Giai Phong, is one of a small but influential corps of journalists who say they are changing the way the press thinks and works in Vietnam. "There has been a struggle between two points of view - to Same and the same serve the masses or to serve the mandarins," he said in an interview at the paper's offices.

"Being a government tool, just printing declarations, is always the easier way," he said. "We wanted to add commentary, criticism, real reporting to this."

Corruption in the national air-

In Manila, Looking for Coup Blame

MANILA — Almost two weeks after the unsuccessful military coup, the government of President Corazon C. Aquino appears beset by disarray, with political and military leaders engaged in an unusual round of recrimination.

The vice president and foreign secretary, Salvador H. Laurel, spent the weekend touring military bases and getting rousing applause by asking the soldiers in rally-style meetings, "Should President Aquino change members of the cabinet?" and "Should the president remove the communists in

Meanwhile, congressional leaders have stepped up their calls for the resignations of Mrs. Aquino's two top aides, her executive secrepary, Joker P. Arroyo, and her spe-cial counsel, Teodoro Locsin.

Critics say the two aides tried to undermine the military leadership during the crucial early hours of the coup on Aug 28, and they have renewed their accusation that Mr. Arroyo is a communist sympathiz-

Mr. Arroyo appeared before the House of Representatives on Tues-day to defend himself against accusations that he is anti-military and a communist. In the process he lashed out at his critics, even as he insisted that this was the time for government officials to "close

Mr. Arroyo defended his earlier haracterization of Colonel Honesto Isleta, the armed forces spokes-man, as "a Goebbels propagan-dist," saying, "A Goebbels is one who tells a lie. He called me a commie, and I'm not a commie."

Mr. Arroyo also suggested that Mr. Laurel was overstepping his anthority during his trips to the military camps on a mission to test the sentiments of the troops. "That the vice president was asked to go to the various military camps, yes," he said. "That he was authorized or asked to ferment dis-

The picture that has emerged in the days following the failed coup has been one of a government searching about to cast blame.

Military officials have accused Mrs. Aquino, and particularly her two aidea, of ignoring military grievances and allowing widespread dissent to spread within the armed forces.

Presidential sides, on the other hand, have said that the coup attempt called into question the loy-alty of large segments of the military.

The result is that far from celebrating the defeat of the fifth and most serious coup attempt, the government has once again been re-duced to the kind of internal bickering that characterized the early months of 1986. We foiled a coup, so we should rejoice," Mr. Arroyo said. "But afer every coup — like this particular coup — someone most be blamed. So we have become the

Mr. Arroyo, like the armed forces chief of staff, General Fidel V. Ramos, has long been a favorite target of critics who see the Aquino government as unnecessarily anagonistic toward the military.

LONDON — At Hampstead, Stephen Bill's "Curtains" marks the London debut of a writer of considerable promise. His play is a blackly funny family album that opens at the 86th birthday party of old Ida (a crotchety Gwen Nelson), who is so full of plastic bone replacements and spinal pain that she pressudes one of her three daughpersuades one of her three daughpers to kill her, a surprisingly diffi-cult operation involving pills, plas-tic shopping bags and cushions. At this point we might be moving into an Agatha Christie whodunnit or a more macabre Joe Orton comedy, but Bill has decided instead to go his own route and explore a peculiarly English ritual of back-handed euthanasia. Having laboriously killed the old lady, who alive was neglected by all but a meddlesome neighbor (Stella Moray in fine gossipy form) the family is faced with problems of corpse disposal, death certificates and furniture squabbling, and it is here that the author's full loathing of local relative values comes to the footlights. His central figure is, in the d, not the daughter who does the killing (Bridget Turner), nor either of the two other daughters (Gillian Hanna and Sheila Ballantine).

Instead it is one of the downtrodden sons-in-law, not Alfred Lynch as a failed farmer but Ralph Nossek as the one who knows everything but can do nothing, not even reach the full stop at the end of his own sentences. Faced with a dead mother-in-law, a murderous wife and an inquiring offstage doctor (when it comes to death, this family s jinxed), the best Nossek can do is to back out of the room with half a estion somewhere approaching his lips and the sort of desperate meffectuality on which whole Ayckbourn trilogies have been con-

This is a marvelous performance at the heart of a bleak look at the non-communicating English sub-urban family in extremis ("What do you mean she has passed away? just bought her a Mackeson") which manages to consider a whole way of life through the sudden ending of it, and my guess is that Swart Burge's wonderfully modulated production will move on to a long West End run.

The main trouble, and there are several, with Graham Swannell's "Light of Day" at the Lyric Studio Hammersmith is that it drifts end-such productions rise above normal box-office laws and become tourist landmarks like the Tower of London or Madame Tussaud's, things to be gazed at in awe because they have always been there rather than because they ever possessed any intrinsic theatrical ment.

If anything unites them it is perhaps that they are so simple as to be easily accessible to oon-theatergoing foreigners, and so amiably and blandly timeless that, like the digi-tal watches that bleep all over their customers, they just run on forever, turning once-alive and variable playhouses into museums of nighly repetition where no self-respecting actor will ever put in an appearance as part of a 15th change of cast.

It is not always possible to spot these shows at birth (most critics reckoned "The Mousetrap" or "No Sex" deserved about six months, who's to say they were wrong?), but I have a ghastly suspi-

This being a thin week, however, it proved less easy to avoid in London, where Dan Goggin's musical, surely the first ever to be derived from a line of greeting cards - so it says in the program, though we are oever told what the line actually was -- is now to be found at the Fortune with bookings already being taken

Sell or Donate? U.S. Tax Laws May Curb Art Gifts

By Rita Reif

FEW YORK -The announcement last Wednesday by a philanthropist and art dealer that he would sell Vincent van Gogh's "Irises," rather than donate the painting to the small Maine college it has been on loan to for the last decade, is the first public evidence that the current art boom and changes in the U.S. federal tax law may result in a cutback in gifts to museums this year.

The decision by the philanthropist, John Whitney Payson, to consign to anction van Gogh's 1889 landscape was made, he said, after "the recent and unprecedented spiral in art prices" and the reduced benefit to donors under the 1986 Tax Reform Act necessitated a reevaluation of his art holdings.

Payson may not be alone in his decision to sell rather than donate. In interviews with auctioneers, art dealers, lawyers and museum officials since the announcement, several have said they expected donations to museums to be down this Nash said Payson's twofold explanation for why he was selling represented a first. Nash said most people who have consigned artworks seem mo-tivated by the increased volume in sales and the high prices achieved, not the tax consequences."

The same is true at Christie's, according to its president, Christoher Burge. "Lawyers have said 'I bet the new tax laws will help your business," he said. New Man on Broadway Backs Resident Theater

By Jeremy Gerard Vew York Times Service

N EW YORK — Two days into his tenure as head of Jujamcyn Theaters, Rocco Landesman sank into a couch, crossed one maroon cowboy-booted foot over the other and took a deep breath. At age 40, Landesman — ruddy faced, red-haired and hirsute — is the youn-gest and probably the brashest president of a major Broadway theater-owning group, and he plans to do business somewhat differently from his larger compensors, the Shubert and Nederlander organiza-

Jujamcyn is owned by a Minne-apolis businessman, James H. Binger, and his wife, Virginia, and named for their children, Judy, James and Cynthia. The company comprises five theaters: the largest, with 1,600 seats, is the St. James; the Eugene O'Neill, the Martin Beck and the Virginia range from 1,100 to 1,280 seats. The Ritz is also about that size, but under the "endangered theaters" designation, only the 499 seats in the orchestra are sold when the theater is booked, thus qualifying it for lower labor in New York — I'll be the first to say that," said Landesman, who replaced Richard G. Wolff on Sept. 1. "And we don't have the millions of dollars in the bank to bid on the shows. So obviously, we have to compete in a different way."

Landesman plans to stake his claim by forging strong relationships with such resident companies as the American Repertory Theater in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and the La Jolla Pizyhouse in California. Those groups developed the musical "Big River," which was co-produced by Landesman and his wife, Heidi, a set designer. Through his involvement in "Big River," and a shared interest in thoroughbred horses, Landesman, a successful investment adviser, became friendly with the Bingers. He was also linked with a group of young new independent Broadway producers who were dissatisfied with, among other things, the trend of importing big British musicals almost to the exclusion of homegrown theater.

One of his first acts, even before taking office, was to hire a creative director, Jack Viertel, a former theater critic who, for the last several years, has been dramaturg at the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles. "We will be developing our own projects." Landesman said. "It's oot going to be a matter of hidding on somebody else's mega-hit. We can't outbid those other guys any-way. We're going to be involved in projects early on. In some cases, we're going to mitiate them; in other cases, we'll form alliances very early on with producers."

"Jack and I really are different from the people the resident the aters are used to dealing with," he added. "We are products of the resident theater movement. We have a much more natural affini-

Viertel will be responsible for cultivating that affinity, "We need to make a real partnership with the resident theaters that's consistent and has its own way of doing business," he said, joining Landesman in an interview last week.

Agency Head Campaigns For Incentive Payments

EW YORK - Should advertising agencies be compensated by a commission, a fee or through an incentive arrangement? Barry Blau, chairman of Barry Blan & Partners in Fairfield, Connecticut, is for incentives. "We should be paid on what we sell for the client rather than on how much he spends on a campaign," he said. "Any business-man in his right mind would agree with that. He doesn't like the idea that, in addition to spending a lot of money on a campaign, he also pays a commission for what he hopes to sell. So an incentive setup makes sense for him and for the agency, if it can be properly worked out."

Mr. Blan admitted that incentive arrangements are feasible in his own field of direct-response advertising because the results are more directly "If I had done that measurable than in general early, I'd probably

Advertising agencies traditionally work for 15 percent of the billings, although negotiations with clients sometimes cut these commissions to 10 percent. Others have fee arrangements, computed on a combination of employee hours spent on the account, overhead and a markup of from 15 percent to 25 percent on both

At Blan & Partners, incentive arrangements bring in only about 15 percent of the agency's revenue, but they are growing, · "We tell our clients, 'I think we could figure out an innovative form of compensation in whole or in part,' and we find more and

Brazil Curtails Debt Plan

Baker Calls It A 'Nonstarter'

WASHINGTON - Brazil's finance minister, Luiz Carlos Bresser Pereira, said Tuesday that the country was sharply curtailing its plan to convert about half its foreign bank debt into bonds. The decision came after the U.S. Treasury secretary, James A. Baker 3d, called the plan a "nonstarter."

Foreign banks had already criti-cized the proposal under which about half of the $68 billion owed to the banks would be converted into bonds to be sold at a sharp discount from their face value. Mr. Bresser Pereira said he was now asking individual banks to accept the proposal on a purely voluntary basis, and that Mr. Baker had agreed with this approach.

Following the morning meeting between the two men, "there was general agreement that Brazil's problems should be addressed in a conventional way," a statement from Mr. Baker said.

Amid discussion of options for Brazil's bank financing package, it added, Mr. Baker "characterized Brazil's recently reported debt pro-posal to securitize existing debt as a

Brazil, the developing world's largest debtor with $112 billion owed abroad, had suggested that banks could sell the bonds at discounts of around 70 to 75 percent of their face value. The bonds would pay interest, giving banks a return similar to what they now get by trading Brazil's loans at a 55 percent discount.

Earlier this year, when Brazil stopped paying interest on its bank debt, its bank creditors increased reserves against possible loan losses. But, they said, the Brazilian plan would have forced them to actually write off much of the

The Baker statement also noted that Brazil would need to reach an agreement with the International Monetary Fund on restructuring its economy before approaching Western creditor governments for debt payment delays.

While American and European companies agonize over un-profitable businesses in China, Hong Kong companies are nim-bly and profitably transferring more and more production to that nation. Already, parts of southern Guangdong province are virtual subcontracting centers for the British territory. "They like to work, and they don't like to take holidays," Rickie P.K. Yu, the Hong Kong-based manager of Wisegroup In-vestment Ltd., said of the 62 people in his knitted-garments factory in Shenzhen, just across the border from Hong Kong. Mr. Yn's employees work 10

GAF stock, after a delayed successful $3.31 billion buyout of $66.75 in active trading. The group led by Mr. Heyman, who won control of GAF in 1983 following a bitter proxy fight to oust the former chairman, Jesse Werner, offered to pay $64 in cash and securities with a face value of $2.50 for each of GAFs 33.5 million common shares outstanding.

That would give the offer for GAF, which makes chemicals and building materials, an indicated value of about $2.23 billion, the company said.

Mr. Heyman said, "We believe that the proposed transaction provides a very attractive opportunity for shareholders to realize the value of their ownership in GAF."

Mr. Heyman holds more than 2.7 million shares of GAF, represent-ing about 8 percent of the outstanding stock.

The proposed transaction offers a premium of more than 80 percent to the closing price of the compa-ny's stock on Dec. 31, 1986, and a 22 percent premium to its closing price on Friday. Some speculators said the proposal of $66.50 per share seemed low. "Heyman doesn't like to pay full price," said one. "He mi think its unlikely a third party will come in.'

An analyst added, "People don't want to tangle with Mr. Heyman. He's proven to be a shrewd investor in the past and a tough guy to try to The Heyman group expects to finance the transaction with its own funds, bank borrowings under a syndicated loan from a group of banks to be led by Chase Manhattan Bank and additional funds to be raised through Drexel Burnham and Merrill Lynch. Mr. Heyman has helped GAF

NEW YORK — Oil prices dropped about 40 cents a barrel Tuesday, falling below $19 for the first time in nearly two weeks, with market participants convinced that world supplies are ontstripping demand.

On the New York Mercantil Exchange, which was closed Monday for the Labor Day holiday, contracts for October delivery of West Texas Intermodiate, the benchmark U.S. crude, closed at $18.94 a barrel, down 38 cents from Friday.

The International Energy Agency said in Paris on Monday that August production by the Organization of Petroleu Exporting Countries totaled 19.7 million barrels daily,

The figure, in line with other estimates, is 3.1 million barrels more than OPEC's official quota and about 3 million barrels more than market needs, according to some analysts.

NYSE Posts Widespread Losses

Stock Exchange posted widespread losses Tuesday as rising interest rates spurred nervous investors to lock in some of the huge profits produced by the bull market. But prices finished well above the day's lowest levels.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 77.97 last week and 70.15 the week before, dropped 16.26 to 2,545.12. Earlier in the session, the Dow was down about 62 points. The blue-chip barometer has fallen 177 points since reaching a high of 2,722.42 on Aug. 25. Declines swamped advances by a 13-2 ratio. Volume amounted to 242.88 million shares, up from 129.07 million Friday before the holi-day weekend. But about one-sixth of that activi-ty was due to trading in Pacific Gas & Electric, which starts trading ex-dividend Wednesday.

Broader market indexes fell. The New York Stock Exchange index lost 1.99 to 175.59. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index skidded 3.14 to 313.56. The price of an average share fell 47

Traders said that weak bond prices, futures-linked selling and the desire to cash in on paper profits amid persistent worries about higher interest rates and the dollar's stability contributed to the market's losses.

"We had a lot of sell programs from the moment the market opened," said Monte Gor-don, research director at Dreyfus Corp. "The Investors seem to be of two minds -- both of them gloomy — about measures to support the U.S. currency. Some worry that the Federal Reserve Board's half-point increase of its discount rate Friday to 6 percent from 5.5 percent was not drastic enough to boost the dollar. Others fear that rising interest rates could harm

There is a fear that the Fed Chairman, Alan Greenspan, "won't defend the dollar and also that too strong an action could hurt the economy," Mr. Gordon said.

Pacific Gas & Electric was the most active NYSE-listed issue, down 1/4 to 19% on about 41.6 million shares. The stock, which yields about 9.7 percent, begins trading ex-dividend

Daihatsu Seeks Niche In Crowded U.S. Market Carmaker Cites Strategic Necessity

By John Holusha New York Times Service

LOS ALAMITOS, California - "What is a Daihatsu Charade?" said C.R. Brown, repeating a question put to him. "We say it is the name of your next new car.

Maybe, Daihatsu Motor Co. Ltd. is the ninth and last of the Japanese automobile companies seeking a piece of the U.S. market. But its lone initial model, the Charade, is a four-seat subcompact with an odd name and an undefined image in a market filled with small cars bearing the names of established companies.

And more cars are arriving steadily from countries without the currency problems of Japan, whose strong yen, compared with the dollar, has made its products more expensive in the United States.

In addition, the company has been granted a minuscule 1987 export quota of only 11,498 cars by the Japanese government, which has voluntarily limited car shipments to the United States. Daihatsu has no assurances that its allocation will be increased in the future. Mr. Brown, executive vice president and chief operating officer of Daihatsu America Inc., says that the move into the United States is a strategic necessity. Daihatsu officials believe their company must operate in all of the major automotive markets as a hedge against a sharp downturn in any single region, he said.

Mr. Brown believes the Charade can fill a niche in the U.S. small-car field. With new products to come in future years, including a small four-wheel-drive vehicle similar to the popular Suzuki Samurai, Daihaisu plans to build a nationwide network of 750 dealers.

So far, it has had no trouble finding dealers willing to sell its cars and expects to have 130 signed up by Dec. 1, when the Charade will go on sale in nine Western and Southwestern states.

Despite the Charade's small size—12 feet (3.6 meters) long, about the same as the Chevrolet Sprint made by the Suzuki Motors Corp. — and three-cylinder engine, it will not be positioned against such very low-priced models as the Yugo from Yugoslavia and the Hyundai Instead, it will be introduced as a "high-line, entry-level car" with three equipment and trim levels in the $6,000-to-$10,000 price range. It will get more than 40 miles per gallon (16.8 kilometers per liter) in combined city and highway driving. Dathatsu officials predict.

The car is sold around the world under the Charade name — an intentional play on the English word. "The idea is that even though it is a small car, it doesn't feel small when you are inside it," said Joshua Ryan, a Daihatsu America official. "It's a charade of a roomy, Mr. Brown added: "It's a car where you can move down in size from a larger, more expensive car without sacrificing your pride of ownership and creature comforts. We think that is an open niche. We don't think anyone else is there now." If the Charade and subsequent models are well received in the West and Southwest, regions that traditionally have been most hospitable to new imported models, Daihatsu plans to expand around the country in a counterclockwise direction, adding the Gulf States, then the mid-Atlantic region, the Northeastern states, the Middle West and finally the Northwest.

C. R. Brown, executive vice president of Dai-

Daihatsu is already selling some vehicles in the United States, though it has had a low profile. It markets under its own name the Hijet, a small utility vehicle used in industrial and agricultural applications, and it supplies a small van sold here by Toyota.

Toyota owns 14.8 percent of Daihatsu and lists the smaller company among its affiliates.

Hyundai of Korea has proved that it is still possible for a newcomer to make it in America: its Excel, which was introduced last year, is one of the best-selling cars in the country. But with the General Motors Corp. and the Ford Motor Co. also bringing in similar small cars from South Korea and Mexico, some question whether Daihatsu will be able to establish a distinct image and repeat the success of Hyundai.

"That's becoming an incredibly right market," said Thomas O'Grady of Integrated Automotive Resources, a market research company. "The Japanese typically try to establish themselves in a market and worry about profits later, but Daihatsu is going to have a tough time getting their foot in the door."

Officials of GM's Chevrolet division recently estimated that there are more than 400 automotive nameplates (such as Chevrolet Camaro) on sale in the United States and predicted that a shakeout is

Pickens Begins Offer For Newmont

United Press Internati

DALLAS — Ivanhoe Partners, a group led by T. Boone Pickens. began Tuesday a $95-a-share cash tender offer for Newmont Mining Corp., strengthening its own earlier $5.68 billion bid for the New York sold, coal and energy company.

Ivanhoe already has a 9.95 percent stake in Newmont. The tender offer is for 28 million common shares at $95 a share or about $2.66 billion. If all the stocks are tendered, the Pickens group would own 34.6 million shares of New-mont, out of the 66 million out-

Newmont's stock Tuesday closed up $.875 at $90.25 on the New York Stock Exchange.

The tender offer is set to expire at midnight Oct. 5 unless extended.

An Ivanhoe statement said the partners had committed $600 milion in cash to the offer.

Analysts said the tender offer was an attempt by the Pickens' group to preempt a counterpropos-al by Consolidated Gold Fields PLC, which owns 26.2 percent of Newmont. The tender offer also was seen as a ploy to reduce the adverse impact arising from a rejection of the buyout offer.

Consolidated could make the acnisition more difficult and costly for Mr. Pickens by raising its stake in Newmont. However, the London company thus far has made no Newmont has several options to frustrate Pickens, analysis say. The company could start buying into Mr. Pickens's Mesa Limited Partnership as a counterthreat.

Or it could distribute the gold shares to its shareholders as dividends, thereby stripping the company of its gold assets. This would also cause Newmont's stocks to plunge and cut into Mr. Pickens's

Central Banks Back Technical EMS Changes

BASEL, Switzerland - Enropean Community central bank governors have agreed to significant technical changes in the European Monetary System to avoid the acrimony that marked the last realignment of currencies, the governor of the Bank of Italy said Tuesday.

Carlo Ciampi said that the officials unanimously agreed on the changes, but he refused to provide details.

He said that the accord covered the EMS's exchange rate mechanism only and did not address multicurrency intervention, a major point of contention between France and West Germany. But he said that topic would be considered later.

The report was commis sioned after France and West Germany criticized each other's tactics during a realignment of the eight EMS currencies in

SHENZHEN: A Hong Kong 'Colony' Grows as Firms Shift Output to China

"They already are at 80 percent of Hong Kong's efficiency," Mr. Hung said. "But I expect they will catch up." He said that turnover "in employees is 0.5 percent per year, compared with about 20 percent in Hong Kong."

Yet Hong Kong managers certainly do not find manufacturing in China trouble-free. Like their U.S., Japanese, and European counterbureaucracy, poor infrastructure. and inattention to quality. "It's very frustrating to be

WHATEVER HAPPENED TO GLOOMY GUS OF THE CHICAGO BEARS?

By Robert Coover. 154 pages. $16.95. Linden Press-Simon & Schuster, 1230 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N. Y. 10020. Reviewed by Michiko Kakutani

N his huge cootroversial novel "The Public Burning." published in 1977, Robert Coover introduced a fictional character named Richard Nixon - a pathetic, but oddly sympathetic, figure, by turns sentimental and mali-cious, self-righteous and paranoid. Coover's latest novel, "Whatever Happened to Gloomy Gus of the Chicago Bears" is set in the 1930s, rather than the '50s, but it stands as a book end of sorts to "The Public Burning," and it features a hero who's a twin brother to the Nixon of that earlier oovel. Like Nixon, Gloomy Gus is nicknamed "Iron Butt." Like Nixon, he hails from Whitoer, California. And like Nixon, he's an odd combination of awkwardness and ambition, a true believer in the all-American precepts of hard work and perse-

More than anything, Gus wants to succeed at playing football and seducing women, but be finds himself incapable of making progress without hours and hours of drill. Just as Nixon had to pracoce smiling, so must Gus practice all the appropriate moves. He learns bow to "tackle and block swear vehemently, break out of a huddle, cradle a ball, throw it and catch it and inflate it, how to squeeze hands, caress them, gaze deeply, joke casually, wink, blow loose wisps of hair back, ask for a phone number, stand tall, and even foxtrot a bit."

For a while, all this practice pays off: For one seasoo Gus is "the greatest halfback in football" and a world-class gigolo, with dozens of women on his dance card. Unfortunately, Gus is less a human being oow than a welloiled machine; and when "the iotricate mechanism comes unglued - instead of a machine, all that's left is a bag of busted-up junk." Gus humiliates himself on the football field, bas a run-in with the police and is packed off to a madhouse. In time, he's partially rehabilitated and he stumbles, more or less by accident, into a group of union organizers. In the end, he becomes the 11th fatality in a confrontation with the police at a labor demonstration. Despite this novel's obvious corollaries to

"Gloomy Gus" is a small, modest novel, meticulously constructed. Where "The Public Burning" attempted to cram the whole sprawl of American history into its mythic narrative noisy world of union organizers. The biggest difference, however, lies in the book's tone. Where "The Public Burning" was stiffused with anger and violence, "Gloomy Gus" has a softer, even melancholy mood.

Michiko Kakutani is on the staff of The New York Times. "Gloomy Gus" focuses on Gus, and the small

By Russell Baker N EW YORK — In Trenton I ran into Sandusky, who had been my next-door neighbor in Greenwich Village. "I'm living here is what I'm doing here," he said when I asked because I was surprised to find him in Jersey, Sandusky being my idea of the quintessential New Yorker. That is, a man who, if you said

"quintessential" to him, would try to bet it at OTB. "When you leave New York, everyplace else is Bridgeport," he always said. Now: "Living in Trenton, Sandusky? You're working an angle." Angle-working was what had got him to Trenton, he said. Back in Abingdon Square one day, brooding over the increasing expense of New York life, he plucked some trash from the air and read about the Yankees threatening to get out of town unless the city did something nice for them.

That brought it all together in my mind," Sandusky said. "I re-membered I'd been reading stories like this for months, maybe years." He remembered Wall Street, which had threatened to move to New Jersey rather than pay yet another New York tax even though Wall Street was rolling-in-money rich. That new tax, or whatever it was, hadn't been clamped onto Wall Street either, had it?

Then he recalled NBC threatening to move to New Jersey unless Donald Trump got a big sweet money break from the city for building NBC a new place uptown. "And everybody getting richer but me, Sandusky, who can only get poorer and poorer because it looks like Sandusky is soon going to be the last guy in New York who isn't getting excused from taxes,"

I could guess what happened. "So you threatened to move over to Jersey unless City Hall gave you a hreak," I said.

They were amazed at City Hall when I issued the threat," Sandus-

Apparently they were also touched by Sandusky's hrass, for each payroller to whom he issued his threat called on a higher-up boss to come look at a relic of old New York; to wit, a New Yorker who refused to grin and bear it as indignities poured upon him.
"My fodda was like you," one city worker told Sandusky. "Had nerve, y know. Gall, chutzpah. Got up on his hind legs and screamed when people tried pushin' him around. Real old-time New Yorker. They don't make New Yorkers like my fodda anymore. New Yorkers nowadays, you dump on them, they just smile and say, 'Ain't it great to be livin' here where you can get dumped on day aod

Anyhow, Sandusky was such a singular figure at City Hall that somebody thought the mayor would be amused to look at him.

"So you're going to move out of New York and go to Jersey," said the mayor. "And just because the landlord is raising your rent and your boss isn't raising your pay and the city just discovered three new taxes you should have been paying the last 10 years but didn't because nobody knew they existed, so now we're also soaking you for lines and

"Mayor," said Sandusky, "it's no use trying to double-talk me. I'll give it to you straight from the shoulder: New York had better make it financially possible for Sandusky to remain in Greenwich Village, or Sandusky is moving to Jersey.

The mayor asked a man who wasn't under indictment to look up Sandusky's holdings. Except for a traditional claim to the right to sit on a well-located set of sandstone steps oo West Fourth Street in pleasant weather, Sandusky was not a significant New York power.

And so the mayor, who is a sentimental man but one who must nevertheless deal with realities, said, "I'm afraid, Sandusky, that New York must let you move to Jersey." Since most of north Jersey was already occupied by well-heeled New Yorkers, Sandusky couldn't locate any closer than Trenton. "All those money people rushed over and bought up Jersey from Hoboken to Secaucus, planning to make real-estate killings when NBC comes over," he said, "but they're kidding themselves. New York's never going to let the big ones get away.

"You think the mayor's going to put up with a limousine trip to Secaucus every time they invite him on the 'Today' show?

The Extractor, the Collector and Beckett

By Carlton Lake

JAKE SCHWARTZ was a dentist who practiced in Brooklyn in the 1920s. He had always had a romantic attachment to books and one day he decided he'd had his attachment to books and the day he day is the history fill of cavities. After a few exploratory skirmishes else-where he established himself in Bloomsbury, opposite the British Museum, as the "The Ulysses Bookshop." Jake had good taste in literature and a nose for trends.

He also had a good head for the rare book business, which is how he became a kind of literary matchmaker who brought to the altar a Pennsylvania brick manufacturer, the University of Texas and Samuel Beckett, a three-way marriage in which everyone grew richer — except Beckett.

The Ulysses Bookshop eventually gave up the ghost. Jake had a wartime fling with the theater in Hollywood, but he was never far from the rare book and manuscript trail, spending most of his time scouting in England and in France. My first encounter with Jake — hy proxy — was in the late 1940s at an anex, in the late 1940s at an anex, i had bought a letter by Paul Variation but the later by Paul Verlaine that day and when I left the saleroom, a nondescript little man in loose-fitting clothes followed me. As I think back on him now, he might have stepped out of one of Samuel Beckett's novels. He grabbed my arm, introduced himself and handed me a business card, all m one movement. It took me a minute or so to realize that although the card said "Dr. Jacob Schwartz," this man wasn't Jake, but his brother David, who was Jake's legman, bundle boy, accountant and general United States representative. I learned from David that Jake was the previous owner of the Verlaine letter 1 had just bought. It wasn't long before I began receiving letters from Jake. sometimes from an address in Paris just across the street from the little hotel on the Rue de l'Université where Joyce had stayed; later, from London and Brighton on stationery imprinted "Dr. Schwartz / First Editions & Manuscripts of Esteemed Authors." His letters boiled

From almost the beginning of Jake's book-dealing, one of his principal customers had been a man named T.E. Hanley, of Bradford, Pennsylvania. Ed Hanley was a brick manufacturer, also into oil and gas, who had once been bitten hy a rare book and had never recovered. Dealers knew he couldn't resist anything good and during the Depression and the postwar pre-inflation lean years they pressed him to buy whatever they could get their hands on.
If he was short of cash, they let him pay m installments; he often was and did. Jake fed to Hanley nearly everything good that came his way. Hanley made monthly payments and whenever he could scrape np some uncommitted cash, he would send Jake an additional check. But Hanley's unpaid balance kept mounting. It reached $20,000, $40,000, $60,000, $80,000 — and these were 1953 dollars.

down to something not much more subtle than: "If you've got the money, I've got the stuff,"

In the summer of 1956, Jake began writing to Hanley in characteristically enticing and hyperbolic style about his "Beckett Collection" and artfully described it in a pamphlet he entitled "A Collection of Manuscripts and Au-thors Association Material of Samuel Beckett." Jake had 80 copies printed "for Private Circulation . . . for Stu-dents and Collectors" but really for Hanley. "The writings of Beckett," it said, "belong to no school; they will make one." Of Beckett's unpublished play "Eleutheria" - in Jake's translation, "Mad Zeal for Freedom" - Jake wrote, "His rejections are superior to other dramatists' dream of perfection." Of Beckett's first book, "Whoros-ope," he wrote: "Two mental operations which interest Mr. Beckett are philosophy and hunacy."

By now, Hanley was so heavily in hock to Jake that he didn't swallow the bait at once but wrote him: "Should you still have the Beckett Collection in another two to three months, I will let you know if I can handle" it. Jake kept the needle in and before long Hanley's resistance collapsed. He rationalized his capitulation by referring to the "Beckett Collection" as an "outside transaction.

But how did Jake manage to get all these Beckett treasures? Well, Beckett had no notion of their potential market value and he found it useful to have a little extra money. Jake, on the other hand, was an expert at separating people from things of that kind - and, as the French put it, under the best conditions. As a former dentist it was only natural that sooner or later he should come to be known as "The Great Extractor"; known also, as Beckett once told me wryly, "for his sparing use of anesthetic." In a letter to Nancy Cunard in May 1956, Beckett wrote,

"Doc S. extracted from me £200 worth of mss and 30 Bones at 5 [shillings] apiece. . . . I liked him well enough — an entertaining ruffian." Ten days later he wrote her: The G[reat] E[xtractor] keeps sending me presents and books. Very generous." Jake sent him a tin of his favorite tea. He sent him a set of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, from which one volume was missing. Beckett responded by sending Jake little gifts. In January 1957, he wrote to Jake, "I have found the typescript of [the play] 'All That alone £10. And you're very welcome to it."

And so Jake Schwartz kept pressing Beckett for more inscribed copies, original manuscripts, corrected typescripts and, occasionally, transcriptions of manuscripts.

Beckett wrote to Nancy Cunard: "Schwartz is becoming rather a nuisance, soon he will be sending me his toiletpaper to inscribe."

After a short, unhappy marriage, Ed Hanley had re-mained a bachelor well into middle age. He lived alone, looked after by an elderly English housekeeper he had inherited from his father. As for women, it was a case of once burned, twice shy. But in 1945, in a Buffalo nightclub, he had caught the act of an exotic dancer named Tullah. Tullah was half Egyptian, half Hungarian and half Ed Hanley's age. Ed sat through two of her performances that night, then commissioned an artist friend to paint Tullah's portrait. In due course he proposed, and since Tullah's main aim in life had always been, as she freely admitted, to marry a millionaire, she accepted. They were married, and Ed took Tullah back to Bradford, along with her beautiful young sister and former dancing partner, Amy. The three got along famously.

But Ed's primary passion centered around his books and manuscripts and he continued to buy. Well before the end of 1958, his debt to Schwartz --- m spite of the regular monthly payments — was more than $128,000. He had taken out bank loans from time to time and borrowed money from his long-suffering sister and from the family business, but he just couldn't stop buying. Also, he was beginning to worry about the safety of his collections. They had taken over every room in his house, as well as the stairways, the attic, the basement - even the garage. One day the insurance company came to inspect the premises. They told Ed they would insure him no longer; the place was a firetrap. Under pressure from Tullah and Amy, Ed made a seven-figure deal in 1958 with the University of Texas. His collections began moving in large installments, from Bradford to Austin, and the Humanities Research Center acquired one of the world's largest - 155,000 pieces - and finest private libraries of modern British and American books and manuscripts. Of course, no real collector ever stops collecting, and once the decks were cleared by the big sale to Texas, Hanley kept right on, with the result that by midsummer of 1961, his new tab with Jake ran to more than $182,000. Finally Tullah convinced Ed that he had to stop buying and the liquidation procedure began all over.

And that was the beginning of our Samuel Beckett collection, which now includes — along with most of the major correspondences and many of the minor ones, and all of the books in their most desirable states - more than 50 autograph manuscripts and corrected typescripts, to-taling well over 5,000 pages. At the heart of this group are Hanley's manuscripts; however, they are not alone. In the 22 years since then, one other collector in Hanley's class has shown his face in Texas. And through him, as luck would have it, Sam Beckett himself, a warmhearted and enerous man, has donated other manuscripts and other books to add further luster to our Schwartz-Hanley golden windfall. But that's another story, one of the kind that makes life in Texas rich indeed, whatever the price of oil.

Carlton Lake, executive curator of the Humanities Research Center at the University of Texas, has just completed a memoir, "Confessions of a Literary Archeologist." He wrote this article for The New York Times Book Review.
